LARGER FIELDS AND IMPROVEMENT IN THE

SPORT-DETAILS OF THE RACING.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE. Washington, Nov. 10.-There was an improvement in the racing at St. Asaph to-day. The fields were fair size, and owing to the improved condition of the track there was not the usual long list of scratches. The racing was fair, except in the gentlemen riders' affair, which proved a farce, was won by the old-time jumper, Elphin, but his victory was due entirely to the fact that his rider had some idea of what a jockey should do. It was a great day for the bettors, all six favorites ng home in front. Parthenia was the first six to score. Pretense for a time seeme likely to upset the calculations of the talent, who had made Parthenia an odds-on favorite, but when Bergen called on her in the stretch he came away and won easily. PLANS FOR A GREAT BILLIARD MATCH. opportunity to see two of the best billiard players in the world play a tournament in the Madison Square Garden Concert Hall this week. Beginning to-morrow night at 8 o'clock, Jacob Schaefer and Frank C. Ives will begin a contest of 3,600 points, fourteen-inch balk-line billiards. The match will continue every night for a week, 600 points being played each night by the winner. If ong runs and excellent general practice are any ation the match will be one of the most brillfant ever played in this city. Both men have improved immensely since they went to Paris, and both are confident of winning the contest. before, as the anchor nurse has been barred out "freezing" the balls on the cushion. This style of play was always extremely tedious to the spectators, who always prefer seeing open around-the-table playing, rather than any long, continuous counting with the balls in one position.

The match is under the management of Maurice Daly and Mortimer Humphrey, two men who have had much experience in billiard tournaments and matches, and they are sure to see that the spectators are well taken care of in the coming match.

JOCKEY CLUB STEWARDS MEET AND TALK A meeting of the stewards of the Jockey club ras held at the Cumberland yesterday afternoon. The situation was talked over by them, but no lefinite action in regard to ricing in the future on the tracks in this neighborhood was taken. Some of the stewards were inclined to take an extremely gloomy view of the outlook, and predicted that racing was killed in this State. The representatives of the race-tracks who were present an-nounced that under no condition would they retain their places as presidents, secretaries, etc., if they would be held subject to arrest for bets made by individuals on the tracks. The meeting adjourned without a result.

SUIT OVER FRANKLIN'S WILL.

THAT SEEMS THE ONLY WAY OUT OF THE COMPLICATIONS.

BOSTON IS TO ESTABLISH A TRADE SCHOOL WITH HIS BEQUEST, WHICH NOW AMOUNTS TO $450,000 QUESTIONS WHICH HAVE ARISEN.

Boston, Nov. 10 (Special).-Benjamin Franklin, with all his wisdom, lacked that worldly knowledge requisite to the drawing up of a will so carefully that the intent of the legatee could not be misur derstood, or his purpose thwarted. One hundred years ago he bequeathed one thousand pounds sterling to the town of Boston in trust, the which was to accumulate for one hundred years, and was then to be used for the benefit of the young mechanics of the town. Portions of his will was as follows:

which was to accumulate for one hundred years, and was then to be used for the beneft of the young mechanics of the town. Portions of his will was as follows:

The said sum of one thousand pounds sterling, if accepted by the inhabitants of the town of Boston, shall be managed under the direction of the Selectmen, united with the ministers of the oldest Episcopalian, Congregational and Preshyterian churches in that town, who are to leit out the same upon interest, at 5 per cent per annum, to such young married artificers, under the age of twenty-five years, and faithfully fulfilled the duttes required in their indentures, so as to obtain a good moral character from at least two respectable citizens, while the applicants. sidered best to erect a trade school somewhat after the manner of those in New-York, Philadeiphia, and other cities, and the committee made a trip to investigate the working of these schools.

It was, after their return, decided to purchase a lot of land in a central position in the city, and bids were advertised for. In the mean time General Walker, of the Institute of Technology, proposed that the fund should be used in connection with his school, and presented some strong arguments in support of his proposition. Public sentiment, however, seems to be in favor of the trade school idea, as more nearly meeting the intent of the will of Franklin.

Now doubts have arisen as to how this school can be maintained if it is established. The conclusion first reached was that, inasmuch as the Selectmen are no longer in existence, the Aldermen were their successors. But the Selectmen were the executive of the town, while the Aldermen are the legislators. Now as the Mayor is the executive, he is by some considered the proper representative of the city on that Board of Trustees. The Board of Aldermen is a shifting body, and its members could not always be relied upon for intelligent, discreet action in matters of this sort.

And now the Corporation Counsel gives it as his opinion that the trustees could not legally establish an endowment fund to carry on the school with what is left after erecting the building and equipping it with machinery, etc. His advice, however, is not regarded as much consequence, and it is altogether probable that a friendly suit will be brought to determine the dutes and percognitives.

Boston has no trade school. A system of manual training has been introduced into the public schools, but this of course merely gives the pupils a hint as to what certain tools are made for, and is not intended to educate them as mechanics. The North End Union, through the indominable energy of

AMATEUR JOURNALISTS MEET.

The Amateur Associated Press of the City of New-York met in rather jolly conclave in Colonel Strong's old headquarters in the Sturtevant House last night. President John H. Stover presided, and Beecher Ogden, of No. 58 William-st., faithfully recorded the proceedings. The main business of the evening was to adopt a constitution and bylaws and select a permanent meeting place. No definite action on this point was taken. It isn't exactly a crime for a member of the society to write for money, but it is, nevertheless, a good deal "off color" to do it. Women are admitted to the association, and one was present last night. The offi-cial organ of the society bears the rather "spooky" title of "Thirteen," but the only thing fatal about It is the wrecking propensity it possesses when the bill for getting it out periodically is presented to the secretary. Aside from this it is a bright and companionable affair, and a matter of pride to its editor, George W. Wood, jr.

The regular Saturday night entertainment of the Lotos Club was especially enjoyable last night, and a large number of clubmen were present. The fol-lowing artists appeared: Signor Tagliapietra, barytone; Nelson Wheatcroft, recitations; Charles J. Ross, comic songs; J. H. Barnes, recitations; J. H. McKinley, tenor; Perry Averill, barytone; E. S. Belknap and Harvey Loomis, original monologue sketch; Franklyn Hart, comic songs; James H. She explained that she was unable to do so then, but would upon her return. The artist replied: "When you come back I'll be dead." Although at that time he was in perfect health, when Modjeska returned to Paris, Bastien Lepage was dead.

The Empress had attended a wedding and desired to find out what sort of an impression her conversation had produced. There is a valuable document signed by Cardinal Richelieu, with the Cardinal's seal attached.

There is a letter from Mme, Récamier, offering her hedroom to a friend, and a letter that went from Paris to London in a balloon during the siege of Paris. Miss Freeman also has several first editions of old dramatics, and a part of the Koran obtained by a friend from a Turk with whom he had influence. Many of the letters and signatures in the collection were obtained through the kindness of Mme Modjeska, who is a warm triend of Miss Freeman. Miss Freeman has a large number of valued letters from the actress written from all parts of the country, and two albums filled with her photographs.
